

The Ethics of Working with Crystal

Many people do not like or agree with the extraction of crystals from the Earth for our use. This is a huge subject and one that can only really be touched on briefly. Firstly it is important to remember and bear in mind that Crystals are part of our Mother Earth we are also part of Her too. We are holographic forms of spirit, divine creator, God, Goddess, Source - or whatever it is to you. Crystals are also a holographic form of spirit too. The only separation between us is through our perception. We are all part of the same energy - we are all part of the One true source that is love.

Some crystals are mined unethically. Communities and the Earth itself are destroyed for the extraction of minerals. Sometimes crystals come to the surface as a bi-product of mineral mining. You can play your part by trying to ethically source crystals. That is only buying from shops/dealers that have a good clear energy.

By working consciously with crystals and nurturing their energies we can give back the love to the Earth - to the Source that created them. Also when we give gratitude for all the experiences we have with crystals (even though they may have brought up things we would rather not look at!) - we are giving back love and appreciation for Creation.

Crystal energies may not always be here in the dense material form they are in right now. I personally believe that Mother Earth wishes us to learn from them at this time for our own healing. Its a great opportunity now to connect with them and get to know their energy whilst we can.
